

Your first homework this term is to decorate your Learning Log! Make it as colourful as you can.

In Scutari the hospital was filthy and messy. Men had to use their own coats and boots as pillows and blankets. There were rats, mice, fleas and lice and more soldiers dying from infections than injuries!

Your task is to design your own pest. Be creative! You could draw, paint or make a model of it.

There are many portraits and photographs of Florence Nightingale on the National Portrait Gallery website. Choose one you like and try to copy it. You could use paints or crayons.

Draw a picture or take a photograph of yourself, and then label your body parts.
How many different parts can you name?

If you ever have to call 999, you will have to tell the operator where you are. It is a good idea to know your home address and telephone number just in case you have an emergency at home.

Learn these, and when you know them we will have fun acting out an emergency with you in show and share!

Look inside your First Aid kit at home. Make a list of all the things you can see.
Do you know what each thing is used for?

Look at this website and choose some of the activities to play:
